Summary of Legislation: Instead of permanently disqualifying the person from holding an elected office, allows a person to hold an elected office five years after the completion or fulfillment of any sentence, judgment, or order resulting from a felony guilty plea, nolo contendere plea, or conviction, unless the plea or conviction was for a crime against the person under Indiana law. Authorizes the sentencing court to: (1) render a person incapable of holding public office for not more than ten years; and (2) if the person is an officer of a governmental entity, remove the person from office; if the person is convicted of a felony, rather than a misdemeanor, concerning public administration.

Effective Date: July 1, 2001.
